The Stranger.

AN EASTERN LEGEND.

An aged man came late to Abraham's tent. The sky was dark, and all the plan was bare. He asked for bread; his strength was well-nigh spent;

His haggard look implored the tenderest care. The food was brought. He sat with thankful eyes.

But spoke no grace, nor bowed he toward the east. Safe-sheltered here from dark and angry skies,

The bounteous hand seemed a royal feast. But ere his table touched the tempting fare,

The Patriarch rose, and leaning on his rod, "Stranger," he said, "dost thou not bow in prayer?"

Dost thou not fear, dost thou not worship, God?" He answered, "Nay." The Patriarch sadly said:

"Thou hast my pity. Go! eat not my bread."

Another came that wild and fearful night. The fierce winds raged, and darker grew the sky;

But all the tent was filled with wondrous light, And Abraham knew the Lord his God was nigh.

"Where is that aged man?" the Presence said, "That asked for shelter from the driving blast? Who made this master of thy Master's bread? What right hadst thou the wanderer forth to cast?"

"Forgive me, Lord," the Patriarch answered, "With downcast look, with bowed and trembling knee,

"Ab, met the stranger might with me have stood, But, Oh my God, he would not worship Thee."

"I've borne him long," God said, "and still I wait; Consider, thou not lodge him one night in thy gate?"

—Wallace Bruce, in Harper's Magazine.

A proud father has been questioning his son, who has just returned from an expensive school, and says the boy answers four questions out of five correctly in every branch of his studies. The power of habit, so-called second nature, is well illustrated in our every day's doings. It grows so strong and clings to us so like the ivy in its tenacity that it oft becomes a ruling passion strong in death. It is well illustrated by a little incident that occurred last Sunday in one of our leading churches.

Our telephone exchange is very efficiently presided over by young ladies, one of whom was the innocent cause of the mirth at the church referred to in our remarks above. In her daily toil she shouts "Hello!" "Hello!" from the moment her duties begin until the close. On last Sabbath she nodded as even Homer did when the preaching was long. She was suddenly awakened by the silvery tinkling of bells, and raising up in her seat, and placing her prayer book to her ear as she would an ear-phone, she shouted "Hello! hello! Central office." The scene can better be imagined than described.—Bloomington Eye.

Two medical schools for women are to be established in the province of Ontario, one in Toronto and one in Kingston, and the Toronto Globe says that in this respect the women of the province will be better off than they are in the matter of higher education in general.
